Computers Becoming Part Of The Income Tax Blues

By CARLTON SMITH
The new income tax forms got you razzle-dazzled? Having trouble trying to find the answer to that puzzler on Line 26, Schedule C? Don't worry. The computer can get it for you—wholesale.

Enlisting computers to help in the preparation of tax returns is fairly new, but even newer is the wholesaling of computer services. It's going to result in thousands of new tax-help offices this year, and greatly increase the chances that it will be a computer holding your hand when you sob to your accountant, "What do we enter on Line 1 (b), Part III?" For even the professional tax accountants are buying computer help.

The Tax Reform Act of 1969 complicated the tax forms, and the taxpayer's problems. At $39 million had their returns prepared last year. A high-ranking Treasury Official jokingly called the reform act "the Lawyers' and Accountants' Relief Act of 1969" — but no joke. We've just about reached the point where, to fill out a return, you no longer need just an adding machine, but a computer.

Tax experts cite reasons for the trend toward enlisting professional help:

- Between 1958 and 1967 the number of taxpayers in the $10,000 to $15,000 bracket increased by 313 per cent. In 1950, about one taxpayer in five itemized deductions. Today almost half the taxpayers do.

The increasing number of cities and states that require it come tax returns.

To meet the increasing demand for tax help, a number of major corporations—including major such as Sears, Roebuck & Co., Montgomery Ward and J. C. Penney—are beginning to spread preparation-of-return last year with tax-help offices in three states. This year it's expanding the service into more than 340 offices.

Taxpayers turning to General Assistance for help last year were pretty much the same people who are loan customers," says the company's chief executive officer, Richard Trenkmann. "They're typically skilled or unskilled workers, home
